Do you ask if the Nerfolk team can play half, or have you questioned their ability to do so. If you have, you are respectfully referred to the game the busy put in Friday atteration spatial the put high a second in the rational game, why just please allow your mind to the part of the Cithus of the Cithus

ing, good base running and excellent bitting, and if the team would only do half as well on an average, as they did yesterday afternoon, they need not fear many defeats.

To particularize would occupy more space than Tur. Virdinian can space, but as the score is appended you can see what each member of the team did. To hit as they did against a pitcher with a reputation like Kagey has—and he is a good twirler—is "balm of gilead" to the wounded spirits of the almost forlorn and hopeless rooter, but with such work as yesterday and Friday's before them they have "cheered up," and are just as ardent and eathering and are just as ardent and eathering unusually good, so if that be correct McPartlin is a "corker," for that gentleman would not allow the visitors but five little, measley, scattering hits, which is certainly not appreciated at all by the Lynchburg rooters, who were anxiously awaiting the news at home. And to help the cause along McPartlin made just as many hits as the whole aggregation of "fill Climbeers." Of the visitors let it be said that they played as if they didn't care whether there was a game or not. Several balls were hit in the field, which to an outsider looked easy, but the Lynchburgers would look at each other and allow the ball to fall between them, After Kagey retired from the game in the seventh, when Berryhill went in to pitch, the whole field was twisted and changed into such a distorted mass that it was hard to keep the run of things. Plock followed berryhill as pitcher. Then more changes followed into when the run of things. Plock followed berryhill as pitcher.
